Daily Fashion Hint

ATTRACTIVE GOWN
Roby red velvet makes this vision of a dress that has no youthful and slender lines. The bodice goes hand-in-hand with the skirt and its very low cut is half concealed by a draped panel at the back. Sliver lined slip drapery that is part of a bow at the back is most attractive.

ing at 5 and 8 o'clock. In the evening there will be a lecture, the rosy and benediction. The church was crowded at all services today.

M. E. Men's Rally Tonight.
One hundred seventy-five men of the First Methodist Episcopal Church are expected at a dinner at 8:30 o'clock tonight at the Kiwanis Club. Following the dinner there will be a program.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color, 15c and 30c.

Enlargement of Orpheum Theatre Is Being Rushed

A large force of decorators was to be put to work today on the interior of the Orpheum Theatre which is being remodelled and enlarged.

Manager P. Mikulic said he planned to have the addition to the lower floor ready for Thanksgiving. This will make the seating capacity of that floor 1,200.

The balcony, which is under construction, will seat 400.

A SOLDIER'S MEMORIAL

The members of Walter E. Brown, Camp Veterans of Foreign Wars, deserve credit for a memorial to the men of Connelville and vicinity who served in all the wars in which our country has been engaged.

While the best tribute to the former service men would be a permanent memorial building, with headquarters for all the veteran organizations and devoted to community uses, its erection at this time or even within the early future is plainly out of the question. The undertaking of the Veterans of Foreign Wars will, therefore, be well adapted to the circumstances and should have all needed support and cooperation by all the veterans and by the public generally.

It is not intended to be in competition with or to supplant in public regard the memorial recently provided by the Daughters of the American Revolution in Hill Grove Cemetery. This forms the tribute of a single patriotic organization. The veterans' memorial will be erected where it will be more exposed to public view and is intended to be an expression of community sentiment rather than of a single organization. No matter which of the two contemplated sites is chosen the memorial will form a distinctive addition to objects designed to invite public attention and to foster respect for the men who did their full part when our country had need to call upon its defenders.

For these and other reasons every citizen having pride in the city and a desire that it shall not lag behind other communities which have provided enduring tributes to the soldiers, the project of the Veterans of Foreign Wars should enlist such active interest that their plans will be carried through to completion in such manner as will reflect creditably upon Connelville as a patriotic center.

AMERICANS AND SAVINGS.

Despite the fact that there are evidences of extravagance and waste on every hand, and that many people seem to be without the desire to learn the art of saving part of their earnings, American thrift, as indicated by the deposits in savings banks, continues to increase.

This is shown by a recent report of the American Bankers' Association which states that the total of savings deposited in the United States has increased approximately 106 per cent in the last decade and the number of depositors by about 141 per cent. In 1913 the savings deposits averaged $89 to each adult and child. In 1922 the average had increased to $155, notwithstanding the increase in population in the meantime. The savings deposited totaled $3,425,275,000 in 1913. By 1922 they had grown to $17,331,447,000, represented by 30,323,326 savings accounts with an increase of 216 per cent.

People are saving money through other agencies than the savings banks. The building and loan associations report the largest number of stockholders and the highest gain in holdings in their history. Employees in industrial and utility corporations are investing increasingly large sums in securities of these enterprises, from which they are receiving dividends averaging a higher rate than the interest paid by savings banks. Still other wage earners are buying United States Treasury Certificates and others adding regularly to their postal savings deposits.

Statistics showing the aggregate of savings through these different agencies are not available. It is compiled they would present a prodigious total, no doubt exceeding all bank deposits of every kind. At any rate they are proof of the fact that Americans are saving more money than ever before in the history of the country. It is a hopeful and encouraging sign and ought to stimulate still more general practice of thrift by those who have not yet acquired the habit.

With its savings banks, building and loan associations and other facilities for saving Connelville offers just as good opportunities in this direction as any place in the United States. Many wage earners appreciate these advantages and have contributed their share toward the remarkable growth in savings funds during recent years. There remain many persons, however, who have yet to learn how to save. The longer taking the first lesson is delayed the smaller will be the benefits to be derived therefrom. Better begin when you receive your next pay check or envelope.

It's dull day when a new "bunch" does not take place in the European entente.

Requirements for Benefits Under Penna. Old Age Assistance Act

The following summary of the Old Age Assistance Act passed by the last Legislature has been issued by the Old Age Assistance Commission and shows who is and who is not entitled to assistance and gives information as to how applications are to be filed:

Who Are Entitled to Old Age Assistance?

1.—Persons 70 years of age or over who are qualified under the following provisions:

(a)—Who have been citizens of the United States for at least 15 years.

(b)—Who have been continuous residents of the state of Pennsylvania for at least 15 years immediately preceding the date of application. Continuous residence is not deemed interrupted if the total period of absence from the state does not exceed three years.

(c)—Who have resided in Pennsylvania a total of 40 years at least five of which have immediately preceded the application.

(d)—Whose income from all sources is below $1 per day.

(e)—Whose property valuation does not exceed $3,000. (The property of both husband and wife when living together is figured as if it were that of one person.)

Who Are Not Entitled to Old Age Assistance?

1.—Persons under 70 years of age, or those 70 years of age but who are disqualified by the following provisions:

(a)—Who have not been citizens of the United States for at least 15 years.

(b)—Who have not resided continuously in Pennsylvania for at least 15 years. (The same exemption as above holds true as to continuous residence.)

(c)—Persons who at the date of application are inmates of either prisons, jails, workhouses, insane asylums or any other public reform or correctional institutions.

(d)—Persons who for six months or more during the 15 years preceding the date of application have deserted their wives or husbands without just cause, and failed to support such of their children as were under age.

(e)—Persons who within the year preceding the application for assistance have been professional tramps or bachelors.

(f)—Persons who have children, or other persons responsible for their support under the laws of the state and able to do so. (Under the laws of Pennsylvania, the husband and wife, the father and mother, the children, grandparents and grandchildren, respectively, of a poor person chargeable to the public, if of sufficient ability are required to relieve and maintain such poor person, as determined by the court.)

(g)—Persons whose income from all sources exceeds one dollar per day.

(h)—Persons who have property valued at more than $3,000 including the properties of both husband and wife when living together.

(i)—Persons who have deprived themselves directly or indirectly of any property for the purpose of qualifying for Old Age Assistance.

How to Apply for Old Age Assistance?

1.—Applicants who, in view of the above qualifications, feel certain that they are qualified for assistance, should procure application blanks for this purpose from the County Old Age Assistance Board at the court house in the county in which they reside.

2.—These blanks should be properly filled out, giving all the information required to the best of their knowledge which information shall be sworn to or affirmed by the applicant and returned to the county board. (The attention of applicants is called to the fact that no legal advice is necessary in making out the application. If they are unable to write, they may ask someone else to do it for them. There is no necessity for the payment of a lawyer's fee in filling out an application for Old Age Assistance.)

3.—Upon receipt of application the County Old Age Assistance Board will make investigations and such recommendations as it deems necessary to the Old Age Assistance Commission and the amount of the assistance to be granted.

4.—The applicant will be notified of the approval or disapproval of his or her application.

5.—An applicant whose application for assistance has been rejected may not re-apply for assistance until the expiration of 12 months from the date of the previous application.

Need for Physical Education

Physical education is declared by Carlisle W. Powell, Director of the American Commission of the American Legion to be one of the principal factors in education. As a consequence, this phase has been included in the observance of National Educational Week, November 18 to 21 sponsored by the Legion, and joined in by hundreds of organizations throughout the nation.

Major General John P. O'Ryan, one of the best known army officers in the United States, has recently written legion headquarters concerning the movement for physical education.

"The fact that about one-third of the young men examined in the draft were physically unfit for military service has an obviously important bearing on the condition of the nation for defense," declared General O'Ryan. "But of even greater significance is the bearing of this fact upon the condition of the Nation for peace-time progress and happiness. This scientific survey confirms what has long been common knowledge among students of national vitality. Each year thousands of our citizens are cut off in the prime of useful and joyful activity. Millions are daily plodding thru their physical ills, the financial loss to the people of this Nation through preventable illness and physical deficiency.

"This great drain upon the vitality and prosperity of the Nation could be rapidly obviated thru the effective physical education and health training of the youth during the age of physical growth and habit formation and by scientific knowledge properly imparted, of the outstanding and fundamental causes of race inefficiency. The great majority of our children spend at least a few years in schools where they are daily under the guidance of teachers whose duty it is to train them for life. They are taught everything from the three R's to trigonometry. Yet the great majority of our school children are not effective contributors to the cure of their own bodies; they are not given scientific training in sports, games and exercises which promote normal growth and established habits of exercise, essential to health in adult life.

"This nation has an investment of several billions of dollars in the equipment and teaching force of the schools. Whatever else may not be yielded by this investment, the public should demand that all the children be given at least the simple daily training essential to physical fitness. All this cannot be accomplished within a year, but with the cooperation of the local, state and national governments and the assistance of other related public and private agencies, I believe substantial progress could be made within ten years. We must have more and better training of physical education and health specialists and—more important than this—we must train the regular teachers upon whom the responsibility for the daily program will fall. Nations, like individuals, frequently

Just Folks

Edgar A. Guest.

POETRY.

You never can tell, for there's no way to know it,
What sort of a garb hides the soul of a poet.

For not all the poems are written at night.
By the curious fellows whose job is to write.

And not all the poetry's told us in rhyme—
It's something that's felt a good deal of the time.

It flows out of men in all manner of ways,
In the houses they build and the places they raise.

In the books they are fond of the pictures they keep,
The way that they look at their babies (and keep).

And I'm sure you would find, could you get deep within him,
The poorest of men has some poetry in him.

He was planting some shrubs, and he worked by the day—
The best he could earn was a jobber's pay.

I saw him had stepped from the plant he'd made known
And planted one bush to some whim of his own.

He had disobeyed orders. I questioned him why,
And stood back and waited to hear him reply.

He couldn't find words which he wanted to use,
He leaned on his spade and he looked at his shoe.

Then he said, "This one shrub was no to-eat-and-fair
I felt God would like to see it just there."

So I left that bush there, standing out all alone,
For the soul of a poet had made itself known.

You Will Take Cold Easiest When You Are Tired

Medical experts agree that colds can be passed from one person to another but they say that in order your vitality to "catch cold" must be lowered, you must be over-tired, or weakened and run down and power of resistance below normal. You can keep free from colds by keeping your strength up and no better tonic food medicine for this purpose than Father John's Medicine is known. It will enable you to throw off a cold and rebuild your health and strength because it is made of pure food elements which strengthen and build up new resisting power. Father John's Medicine has had over sixty-eight years of success for colds, coughs and body building.—Advertisement.

London Favors Fur and Rich Velvets

Feltry and Heavy Fabrics Used in Interesting Combination.

One-half of all models have their skirts cut together in front with all folds extending fan-shape, to the hem, and the other half have every possible scrap of fullness scrunched right away from the front and bunched up at the back into what has a startling resemblance to a bustle, or at any rate a very full double-looped bow with long diagonally slashed ends which reach to the bottom of the skirt or trail on the floor. This last, of course, writes a London fashion correspondent, applied only to evening dresses.

But the bunched back effect is seen on heavy cloth street dresses made to be worn under short, flaring, wide-sleeved coats of heavy embroidered or brocaded velvets or fur.

Fur is on everything, a foot wide band around the bottom of a velvet or brocade cloak, cut as straight and slim as a chemise dress, with a similar straight band of exactly the same width set around the neck and dipping forward under the chin.

Lining for the new "liquid" metal fabric evening cloaks is ermine or rabbit, showing in the immensely wide turned-back cape collar, the outside of which is upholstered in a double bolster effect with tiny jeweled buttons fixing the padding at intervals.

Fur is used on all the new suits as a straight close-fitting curate band of Russian sable around the neck of a little rosewood brown velvet made with a straight hunting jacket and a skirt snugly plaited across the front breadth, but perfectly plain in the back. No other fur appears on this suit; the sleeves are close-fitting and widen slightly at the wrist, but are fitted with storm wristlets, just as hunting coats are. These are made of heavily embroidered chambray material and are the only touch of color.

Fur in broad bands and in tiny rolls trims evening gowns of metal lace, polka-dot crepe de chine and satin. A bonnet of dusty silver fur, extending half way to the elbows, is used on a silver tissue dinner dress. It is the only trimming, and the material is arranged in long, straight panels from the shallow neckline to the hem, caught at the low waistline by an Egyptian scarf of pearl, silver and diamond-headed gauze, fastened in front by an Egyptian motif and hanging to the floor.

There is no hip trimming on any of the new models. The line from shoulder to ankle is as straight as possible and what fullness is necessary is obtained by inverted plaits or slits of the underlap over which the circular tunic or lace-bordered outer skirt slip gracefully.

This circular model is more used than was first expected. But the flare is so slight that on first sight the gown appears to be straight cut. It is only at the edge of the tunic that the sweep is noticeable, and here it is accentuated by rolls of fur or plaited velvet bands.

Inverted Ribbon Ruffles. An exceptionally new and distinctive use of ribbon is that of setting graduated rows of ribbon onto skirt so that the narrowest ribbon is at the bottom of the skirt and the widest near the top. Another unique feature of this trimming is that the ribbon is sewed at the lower edge instead of the upper, leaving the upper part of the ribbon to stand out from the material. The same application appears on the small puffed sleeves.

Winter and the Large Hat. There have been few models of large hats in the extreme picture variety, except formal velvet ones trimmed with sweeping feathers. This is the hat that is most often made to appear as by the application of trimming.

TO IMPRESS SIGHTSEERS

Edward Simmons, Painter Who Lived in House Made Famous by Hawthorne, Tells of Incidents.

Mr. Edward Simmons, the painter, lived during part of his youth in the house that Nathaniel Hawthorne made famous as the "Old Manse." In his book of reminiscences entitled "From Seven to Seventy" Mr. Simmons gives an entertaining account of the house. The Old Manse was built in the manner of the eighteenth century, entirely of wood; the oaken timbers were held together with oak pegs. We boys found it quite easy to draw them from place, and we used them for thespians in our dory. Fortunately, the grown-ups "got on to us" or I believe the house would have eventually collapsed.

There was a gabled roof with chimneys at both ends and of course all sorts of wonderful nooks and crannies to hide away in. It was up in that attic that a caller found Grandmother Ripley rocking a cradle with her feet and holding a book that she was intently reading. It was written in Sanskrit. She apologized because she needed a dictionary to read the language. That was not so of Latin and Greek; she read them fluently; but she used to say, "I cannot think in Sanskrit."

Concord was a historical spot and in the summer was overrun with tourists who, not content with viewing the scene, set the "hot foot" around the world, and so forth, would invade the Old Manse. They were allowed to go all over the house, much to the discomfort and the amusement of the occupants. One day when I was still a young man there was a party of people upstairs nosing round while Uncle Gore (Judge Ripley) and I were in the sitting room. My sister had brought in not long before a long, draggled bit of Spanish moss and had put it on the chimney shelf. While the tourists were upstairs my uncle and I, taking the moss, went to the front door and, climbing upon a chair, hung it there. It trailed down three or four feet. When the party came down and started to go out the moss was in the way. Lifting it so that the door would open without catching it, my uncle bowed and with his best manner as chief justice of the Massachusetts Supreme court remarked: "The moss—of which he wrote!"

Every jaw fell; their eyes rolled upward, and in dead silence they marched to their carriages.

Hindu Legend.

The Hindus have a legend that Hanuman, the monkey-faced god, with the aid of a monkey army, helped rescue the wife of the divine hero Rama from a demon. Another legend is that Hanuman, brought men a stolen gift, the mango, a valued Indian fruit. For the theft the monkey was condemned to death by fire, but it escaped with only its hands, feet and face burned, and these have been black ever since.

The Hanuman monkey in his native land is a privileged being. In some Hindu communities these monkeys live in the top stories of the houses of the natives. If one native bears another a grudge, he places rice or corn on the enemy's roof and the monkey tears up the roof to secure the particles which have fallen into the crevices, so that the house is opened to the rain.

For Swollen Joints

Most remedies fail but Joint-Ease succeeds.
It's for joint troubles only, whether in ankle, knee, hip, elbow, shoulder, finger or spine—whether rheumatoid or not.

It limbers up stiff, inflamed, painful, creaky joints so quickly you'll be astonished.
Two seconds' rubbing and away it goes through skin and flesh right down to the bone and ligaments—that's why it succeeds. Ask Connelville Drug Company, Union Drug Company or any reliable druggist—Advertisement.

MOTHERS AND THEIR CHILDREN

A Substitute Kindergarten.

One Mother Says:

I live where my little girl does not have the benefit of a kindergarten, but I am substituting for it in many ways. Recently I bought her some modeling clay. Then her father sawed off a large flat board which could be placed on the floor in the kitchen while I am working. She has a smaller board she can hold in her lap to work with if she wishes, or she may work flat on the big board. I give suggestions as to things to make, talking to her about them as I work. She has an old cloth apron which keeps her from getting too besmeared, and the board keeps the clay all in one place. Copyright, 1923, Associated Editors.

Army Airmen to Girdle the Earth

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Plans for an epic flight by American aviators—a trip around the world—are complete. This history making achievement, last of the "big flights" left for pioneering airmen, is now to be the goal at which all the Army airmen are aiming.

The State Department has asked all governments whose territory would be crossed to give assent to the flight. All are expected to do so.

Plans for the world-girdling flight, which General Patrick, chief of the Air Service, has approved, call for it to be made next spring and summer.

IMMIGRATION BILL PROVIDES CUT IN QUOTAS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—The Administration's new immigration bill will provide for a two per cent quota instead of three and will base quotas on the census of 1890 instead of 1910. Representative Johnson, chairman of the House Immigration Committee, announced today.

The new bill will let in 310,000 yearly as compared to 350,000 under the present law.

Weather Delays Ferguson Road

Special to The Courier. DUNBAR, Nov. 19.—The disagreeable and damp weather of the past two weeks has greatly retarded the work on the Ferguson-Mount Braddock road, now in course of construction, and but little has been done during that time. The road, however, is in a usable condition for about half the distance, and a good supply of materials has been distributed along the line for use as soon as the sewer over Pogue run has been completed. Much of the grading east of Beeson hill has been done but want of material for the concrete bridge over Youngs Mill run at Ferguson retards work in that quarter.

The materials for this bridge are expected soon and the hope is to have the adjustments of that bridge completed before the stream rises to its winter level. W. S. Frank is anxious to get the road opened as soon as possible and with this in view is using his men thereon every available day. As soon as the road is completed the county will construct the fence along its sides through the usable fields of Oakmont farm, and until then the boundary fences of the fields will be kept closed. A spell of fine weather is looked for in early December when a special effort will be made to complete and open the road to public service.

Father of Microscopy.

Father of scientific microscopy is the title given by modern scientists to Anthony van Leeuwenhoek, a native of Delft in Holland, where he died on August 26, 1723. Although without the advantages of a liberal education, Leeuwenhoek was a man of great intellect, ability, and many important discoveries were made by him, the chief being undoubtedly that of the capillary circulation of the blood. He first sought to discern this in the comb of a young cock, the ear of a white rabbit, and the membrane of a bat's wing, and failed, but achieved success with the tail of a newly-hatched tadpole, in which, he says, "I could distinctly perceive the whole circuit of the blood in its passage to the extremities of the vessels and its return towards the heart."

Pressed His Suit. When the fine old mansion of Chatham, on the Rappahannock, was sold a few years ago, a young teacher said to her sewing school in the parish house of St. George, "You are all Fredericksburg children, and ought to know something of its history, but I do not suppose any of you knows a thing about Chatham."

To her surprise a little girl piped up: "Yes, I do, Miss Clara; papa read it aloud from the paper."

"Then tell the others, Sally."

"At Chatham General Lee had his coat torn," answered Sally triumphantly.

The teacher was perplexed until she found in the daily paper the phrase: "It was at Chatham that Gen. Robert E. Lee pressed his suit with the lovely Miss Custis."

Ankle Deep. O'Halloran rushed up to a cottage, shouting: "Lend me a spade! Lend me a spade!"

"What for?" asked the owner of the cabin.

"To dig my friend out of the bog," replied O'Halloran. "He's just fallen in and he's up to his ankles!"

"Up to his ankles!" replied the other. "Then you don't need a spade! I'll lend you a rope."

"Begrab, but a rope's no good, replied the would-be rescuer. "He couldn't catch hold of it!"

"Why not?"

"For several reasons," replied O'Halloran; "but the chief one is that he went in head first."—Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph.

At the Theatres

The Paramount

"JACQUELINE," or "Blazing Barriers," on view today and tomorrow at this theatre, was written by James Oliver Curwood. It is a fascinating story of the great outdoors.

Jacqueline Roland, who dwells with her parents in the heart of the Canadian timber country, is loved by Raoul Radon, a sturdy youth, who, many years before, exhausted and footsore, had wandered into the Roland home, there to remain. The love affair of Raoul and Jacqueline runs smoothly on until Jacqueline goes on a visit to Quebec, to the home of her uncle Edward Macdonald. There she meets Henri Dubois, a conscienceless ne'er-do-well who has just become implicated in a serious crime for which he is being blackmailed by Li Chang, a sinister figure in Quebec's underworld. Dubois, during Jacqueline's stay in Quebec, pays her assiduous court and when she plans to leave for her home, prevails upon her uncle to send him up to Two Rivers Camp as superintendent. Two Rivers being Jacqueline's home and the property of Macdonald.

Even aside from the fact that the story is extraordinarily gripping and the production value splendid, "Jacqueline" is made unique by the most powerful assemblage of players ever gathered together in one production. Lew Cody, Marguerite Courtot, Edith Shannon, J. Barney Sherry, Edmund Breese, Russell Griffin—these are but a few of the monster group of celebrities whose artistry will arouse your most enthusiastic appreciation.

Wednesday and Thursday, "Shattered Idols" will be presented.

The Soisson

"PENROD AND SAM," screened just as Booth Tarkington wrote 'em, is the feature picture today, Tuesday and Wednesday at this theatre. "Penrod and Sam" abounds in irresistible humor, which is interspersed with pathos, which helps to make the film a really human portrayal of the life of a true American boy. Penrod and his "gang" cavort from one misadventure to another. First off the bat they stage a mimic war, then they initiate the neighborhood "stake" none too gently into their secret society; they follow this up with a "mammoth circus" and in general get on the nerves of their elders. Benny Alexander's portrayal of the character of Penrod is without a doubt the best work that this young artist has ever done for the screen. He is a natural actor and can draw tears and evoke laughter with a facility that is uncanny. Joe Butterworth, who is Sam, is equally well cast. Other popular screen kiddies in the picture are Buddy Messinger, Newton Hall, Gertrude Messinger, Joe McGraw and Gene Jackson. "Penrod and Sam" takes one skipping back to the years of childhood days, bringing to life fond memories of the period when one was carefree and joyous. The production is said to offer even better opportunities for sympathetic translation to the screen than did the popular hit of "Penrod."

"THE CHEAT," a new Paramount picture, which provides Pola Negri, world famed star, with the funniest and most satisfying role of her screen career, opened today at this theatre for a three day attraction. Jack Holt plays opposite Miss Negri. The story deals with a wealthy girl of Latin-American parentage who elopes with an American in Paris where Carmelita, played by Miss Negri, has excited the interest of Rao Singh, a crook posing as an Indian prince and who follows her to New York. Meeting with financial reverses, Carmelita is forced to go to him for aid. When the time comes for the girl to meet the terms of her bargain she recalls the "Prince" brands her as a cheat, for which Carmelita shoots him. Her husband, portrayed by Jack Holt, to protect her, assumes the blame. This is a most realistic episode and, along with the court room scene in which Carmelita tears the dress from her shoulder and reveals the brand Rao Singh had placed upon her, thus reversing the verdict of guilty against her husband, kept the audience enthralled. "The Cheat" decidedly presents Pola Negri at her best. Besides Jack Holt and Charles de Roche, those rendering effective support are Dorothy Cumming, Robert Schable, Charles Stevenson, Helen Dunbar, Richard Wayne, Guy Oliver and Edward Kimball.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday, James Kirkwood will be seen in "The Eagle's Feather."

Vacationing. "Next year," said Jones, "next year I'm going to take a real rest; that's me."

"Going to the country?"

"No sir! Going to stick my car in the shop for overhauling, scuttle my launch, send the dog to a kennel, ship my wife to the seashore, put on my overalls and stay home!"

White Lily Bacon Comes in Lean Strips

WHAT adds more rest to a meal than the right kind of bacon—with fried eggs and parsley garnishment; or with other ingredients and any number in a sandwich? Particularly if the bacon is perfect. White Lily is taken from the lean sides of carefully chosen, cured porkers, less than one year old. There's real meat in White Lily after frying because the tender strips don't crisp too much in the pan.

They're cured like White Lily Hams and have the same delightful flavor and tenderness—the juiciest sort of meat, the purkier contributes to the family menu. Always the same—always reliable—always satisfying. Remember the name at your dealer's—White Lily—it is insurance against disappointment.

Flesh!

MANY are the eyes that are turned to gaze with keen admiration on the well developed, healthy girl no matter where she may be—on the rapidly moving thoroughfare or gliding gracefully over the dance floor.

All eyes turn because we all appreciate the girl with the figure so firm and plump—the girl with radiantly real cheeks, cheeks that carry a touch of rosy from nature's own garden—the girl with the sparkling eyes, keen and sharp—the girl with buoyancy and the swing of youth.

Not necessarily an out-of-doors girl. Just a girl with over increasing blood cells. Just a girl filled with the vim and vigor of youth. S. S. S. since 1826, has stood for increased blood cells. S. S. S. means restored strength—rekindled vitality—added energy. Take S. S. S. and watch the bloom of youth return to your cheeks. Watch that flabby, ill nourished flesh fade away before flesh that is firm and plump. Red blood cells will do it and S. S. S. will build them. It contains only pure vegetable ingredients. S. S. S. is sold at all good drug stores. The large size bottle is more economical.

SOMERSET MAN'S GUARANTEE HOLDS

SOMERSET, Nov. 18.—Twenty-seven years is a long time for a guarantee and a watch to hold good. But if you'll ask David Goodstein, head of the Somerset Improvement Company, about his latest business experience, he'll tell you it isn't so long after all.

It's all about a watch which Mr. Goodstein, then a jeweler, sold to a farmer in 1896. It was a hard sale and the purchaser deliberated over his decision. Finally he agreed to take the watch on condition that the jeweler guarantee it. Mr. Goodstein grabbed a sheet of paper and wrote his own guarantee for the watch's condition.

While lounging recently in the Ball's department store operated by his son, Max Goodstein, and his son-in-law, Herman Ball, Mr. Goodstein was approached by an elderly man who held out his hand in greeting. Mr. Goodstein was puzzled.

"I don't wonder you forget me after all this time," the stranger said. "Perhaps this sheet of paper will remind you."

The old jeweler glanced at the slip of paper. On it, written in Hebrew characters, were the words: "This is an honest man." He had written the words 27 years ago.

"Oh, yes," Mr. Goodstein chuckled. "How is the watch?"

"Fine and dandy and running tip-top," the stranger replied.

"Well," said Mr. Goodstein, "my guarantee still holds good."

Bergdoll Decees Death to Kidnapers

By GUS M. GRIMM (United Press Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN (By Mail to United Press)—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, Philadelphia's famous slacker who fled to Germany, declares the next attempt by Americans to kidnap him will result in "death for his assailants."

Bergdoll is prepared, his friends declare. He has twice successfully evaded attempts to capture him and he now believes he has things so well organized that another attempt will prove fatal to those wishing to molest him.

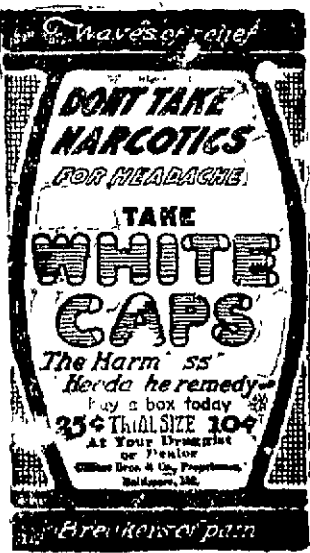

The slacker has already killed one assailant—an alleged hitting of Lieutenant (Jimmie) of Ohio, who is in jail awaiting trial. The first attempt Bergdoll lives in Eberbach in Southern Germany, where he is the village hero. Americans, especially newspapermen, are treated coldly, and are always glad to leave Eberbach.

Naturally, Bergdoll goes heavily armed, and is always on the alert. His chauffeur, also an American, is equally as suspicious of American visitors.

An American correspondent recently visited Eberbach and notified the police, as is required, of his presence. The police, friendly to the American slacker, refused to believe the correspondent, declaring he surely wouldn't come all the way from Berlin and pay out millions of marks in expenses "just to interview Bergdoll." And the American correspondent didn't interview him, though he finally convinced the police that he really was a newspaperman and not an enemy to Bergdoll in disguise.

RAILROADS SHOW GREAT INCREASE IN EFFICIENCY

Moving More Cars and More
Tons of Freight Than in Their History.

SPENDING LARGE SUMS

Increased efficiency throughout their operations as a result of improved methods has been an outstanding characteristic of the railroads this year and it continues to mark their service to the public in striking contrast to older days when more or less indifference distinguished the relations of our carriers with their patrons. The bettered spirit animating the railroad organizations is not confined to the men actually in contact with the travelling and shipping public but it permeates official regions as never before, because railroad heads have come to realize keenly that their successful existence depends upon the preservation of amicable relations with the people, in the opinion of the Manufacturers' Record.

The railroads are moving the heaviest traffic in their history. Week after week lately there have been more than 1,000,000 cars loaded with revenue producing freight. This freight has been moved expeditiously although the companies have not yet received all the new equipment ordered from builders early in the year. Since January 1, last 40,000,000 cars have been loaded with paying business, this being an increase of 7,000,000 cars as compared with the same period of last year. Furthermore, statistics have been compiled for the first eight months of this year showing that the ton mileage of freight traffic in that time amounted to more than 204,000,000,000 net ton miles, an increase of 21% per cent over the same period of last year. It is true that traffic last year was reduced by the shipmen's and the miners' strikes, but it was nevertheless 5% per cent greater than in 1918 when shipments were greatly stimulated by the war and it was even more than 3% per cent greater than in 1919 the previous record year for traffic.

About ten years ago L. D. Brandeis, then a lawyer in Boston, now a justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, caused a sensation by declaring in the course of professional activities in connection with a railroad case, that the railroads could, by increasing efficiency, save $1,000,000 a day, or $365,000,000 a year. His statement was greeted by men who disagreed with him but results have given ample testimony in the truth of that assertion on behalf of efficiency. Further evidence is to be found to demonstrate the existence of much greater effort on the part of all railroad men in the following declaration from the car service division of the American Railway Association:

"The railroads on October 17 moved more freight cars, (that is both loaded and empty cars), than ever before on one day in history. Fifty-two (152) railroads representing about 90 per cent of the mileage for that class of carriers, on that day moved 1,024,428 cars. The significance of this performance can be realized more readily when consideration is given to the fact that this represents approximately one-half of the total number of freight cars owned by the railroads of the United States . . .

"It is this stimulation on the part of the railroads in the handling of both loaded and empty freight cars that has resulted in the carrying of this year being able to move the greatest amount of freight on record with virtually no car shortage while at the same time there has always been a supply of surplus freight cars in good repair and immediately available for use when needed.

"Since May 13, to October 30 inclusive, more than 1,000,000 cars have been loaded with revenue freight in sixteen different weeks. In fourteen of these weeks the record loading was during the week of October 14, 1920, when the total was 1,018,179 and which stood well this year, has been exceeded. . . .

"Despite the record amount of freight which they have been called upon to handle this year, the railroads have succeeded in more than handling their current repairs to equipment with the result that their rolling stock is now in the best condition it has been in years."

Last year the railroads announced that they would spend within a year an average of $1,500,000,000 for improvements and equipment. They have ordered at once for $400,000,000 of work under that program and early this year they had $1,100,000,000 put to work; this has long since been given out and some of the contracts are still under way. But much of this big order represented long delayed improvements and orders for equipment and as all is not yet completed, the impossibility of the efficiency record of the railroads this year is the more enhanced, an encouraging fact about the entire situation being the apparent feeling among all railroad men that individual as well as cooperative success depends upon individual efficiency. Of course there are exceptions; there would not be a general rule if there were none, but it is apparent to even a casual observer that the prevalent railroad spirit is a vastly different and more agreeable and inviting thing than it used to be. The continued success of the railroads depends upon it.

MANX CAT WITHOUT TAIL

Animal is Native to the Isle of Man—
Jumps Forward Like a Rabbit.

The Manx cat, which is native to the Isle of Man, a British island in the Irish sea, is noted because of its absence of a tail, and a formation of body that distinguishes it from cats of other breeds. The origin of the Manx cat is attributed to the arrival on the Isle of Man of ships belonging to the Spanish armada that were wrecked there. It is said that these cats were most probably brought from Japan or other parts of eastern Asia. In the true Manx cat the forelegs are short and the hind legs are long and the hind legs are as short as possible, making the hind legs long or short the forelegs, so that the cat seems to jump forward like a rabbit and is therefore sometimes called a rabbit cat. The Manx cat may be of any of the recognized colors.

All of the cats of the islands in the East, the Malay peninsula, Japan, China and lands contiguous, and even those of Siam, seem to have curious formations of the tail, whether cut short, forked, kinked or otherwise. But these cats are smaller than the Manx cat and there are differences in the call or language and ways and character.—Detroit News.

London Lawyers Hard Hit.
"The worst legal year on record," is given as the London lawyer's opinion of the last twelve months and cases baristers than ever are said to be looking for a livelihood elsewhere than in the courts. General hard times lead the potential plaintiffs and defendants to settle their differences without the assistance of wigs and gowns, or, if they cannot settle it, they let the difference lie.

In spite of a common and old opinion that money flies as naturally to a lawyer's pockets as steel filings do to a magnet the "howling fees" of the bar at all times direct themselves chiefly to certain larger and more notable pools.

The emoluments of the great majority of baristers would, of course, no great and even in normal times when a slump comes (and the big pools must still be fed) the smaller receptacles are in danger of running dry, indeed.—Manchester Guardian.

Hard Times.
Montagu Collet Norman, governor of the Bank of England, was talking at a dinner in Washington, about hard times.

"I heard a story the other day," he said, "about a slum landlord who was going around one morning collecting his rents. At a certain house a boy handed him half a crown."

"Half a crown?" said the landlord reproachfully. "Else you are, over five quid in arrears, and you only give me half a crown?"
"Oh, go on about your business," said the boy. "You wouldn't have got that if the old man hadn't been and sold the kitchen door."

Coughing only aggravates a cough

Control coughing—the first step in curing a cough.

COUGHS are frequently due merely to irritation caused by a congested condition of throat and lung tissue. Persistent hacking will then only increase the congestion and continue the cough indefinitely. Such coughs can and should be stopped at once because they are a futile waste of strength. Dr. King's New Discovery checks coughing quickly and without any bad after-effects. It quiets violent throat and lung spasms and gives the congested a chance to clear away. It has an agreeable taste. All druggists.

DEFENDS THE NAME FATHER

Nicknames Such as "Old Man," "Pa-ter," "Dad" and "Daddy" Do Not Express Affection.

What is in a name? Why, everything, of course. Get a bad name and you will find it out. Call a man a jailbird and he is doomed. A great deal of time is consumed by parents in finding a name for a new baby which comes into a home. Much thought is given to the selection of a baby's name, because he is so precious and sweet, and because he will carry it through life. The baby has nothing to say but he is the choice. It is, therefore, all the more important that a name be given him which he will be pleased with when he becomes a man. Unfortunately, few boys and girls are entirely pleased with their names and in many cases they seek to change them.

There is another question which arises later on, and that is the question as to what a boy will call his father. A father of designation have been assigned to the paternal head of the household. By name he has been called "the governor." This is an official term and amiable of rulership. It is not strictly called a term of disrespect, but the objection to it is that it lacks affection.

"Father" is another designation for father. It sounds classical, for it is the Latin name for father. It is, however, seems cold and formal. Occasionally we hear a boy speaking of "the old man." This is, of course, the old name which he is calling cleverly. There is a swagger about an attitude of this kind which is not admirable. Here is another lad who calls his father "dad." He means to be respectful and even affectionate, but this name is not dignified, to say the least of it. A good father deserves a better designation than that of "dad." "Daddy" is the term many girls employ, and it is much more tender and affectionate. But what better name can we find in our Arch-Saxon vocabulary to call out father than "father"?

Paris, which has 8,000,000, and the Library of Congress, in Washington, with half a million less. Thus, between them alone, these three great institutions possess 9,500,000 books of all kinds.

She Skipped Trains.
In this fast-moving world, transportation takes new forms over night. The fair century of steam railroading in the United States has not yet passed. Young men remember the first motor car. We are just beginning to fly. There arrived in New York from Pennsylvania not long ago an elderly woman. Her home was on a farm near a city in the hard coal region. Her trip to New York was by automobile, and what makes it unusual was that she had never ridden in a steam train. She had skipped a generation of transportation, so quickly do things come. There are hundreds of small communities in the country which made the jump straight from oil lamps to electric lights without ever seeing gas. They had their water-meadow lights long before the cities, using coal for gas. They, too, skipped a generation.

An Age of Specialists.
"This is an age of specialists," remarked Mr. Tenpoot from his back porch. "Of concentration, so to speak. Even the vegetable kingdom seems to be aware of this tendency of the times."

His neighbors sent him an inquiring glance which he accepted as a signal to continue.
"At least my peach tree seems to be lavishing all its resourcefulness upon one peach."

MILLIONS OF BOOKS PRINTED

On an Average of 200,000 Volumes Are Published Each Year Throughout the World.

Have you ever wondered how many books there are in existence? On the average 200,000 volumes are published each year throughout the world, and as 5,000,000 appeared last century, one can obtain a fairly good idea of the size of the world's bookshop. Adding together the number of volumes published in each country since printing was invented, the astonishing total of 50,000,000 is reached. The amount of energy, time, paper and printers' ink which have gone to produce all these books is absolutely incalculable.

The three largest libraries in the world are the British Museum library, in London, which has 4,000,000 volumes, the Bibliotheque Nationale in guess you thought I was when you first came out here. I've never been in love with him, and he's never tried to make love to me. But there's hardly anybody I've cared for as much as I do for him—and there's nobody on God's green earth that I'd go as far for, in the way of doing what he wanted me to do. He was so perfectly sick and helpless last Saturday night over what had happened that I never occurred to me, till he'd gone off and left me here, that I'd had any choice in the matter."

"You're on his side, too," the girl remarked. "You don't care anything about me. You've made that plain enough from the first."

"Don't hint," Jennie commanded crisply. "We've made a good start talking out. Let's keep it up. How did I make it plain I didn't like you?"

"You've never come here to the house since I've been here, though he's asked you to, he says. But you used to come before that."

"You never asked me to come. I thought you would when you made up your mind I was all right and I'd wait for that. But of course I'm on his side," Jennie went on. "As I said, I'm fond of him. All I've cared about you was whether you were going to make him happy or miserable. That's all I've had a chance to care about, because I don't know you very well. I think I could get to like you, if we ever had a decent human chance. You're enough like him for that."

"But in this last particular case I was on your side. I did all I could to keep it from being a mess. I met your father at the train myself, and lied to him about the reason why—which isn't a thing I like to do with people I care about. I kept him away from home as long as I possibly could, to give George Burns a chance to bring you back first. So I haven't been an enemy exactly."

"The girl's eyes were smoldering. "If you weren't an enemy, why did you give George away?" she asked, suddenly.

"That was my mistake," Jennie admitted. "I didn't think of it as giving him away. I thought he'd done a good job and I wanted him to get the credit for it. When I saw how your father was taking it, it was too late to stop."

"I should think you might have known!"

It wasn't a gracious reception of an apology, but there was a note of wavering in it that gave the older woman an intimation of victory. She was content to say, "That's right, I suppose I must have," and wait.

"Oh, I haven't got anything against you—especially," Trix broke out at last. "And I don't suppose it's your fault that you're here. But—did you ever have anybody watching you and telling tales on you? Making that their business? Well, you'd hate it, too. And you'd hate anybody that did it. And the nicer and smoother they tried to be, the more you'd hate them. I don't know why you've been letting me alone, like you have; having me give the orders and letting me go wherever I liked in the car."

"But you think it was because I was trying to get something on you, to report to your father? Is that it? Good Lord! Talk about poisoning wells! I don't mean you—nor your father, either. But what a situation!"

She took a minute to think it over; blunkily at first, but then she began to find her line. "Look here, Trix," she said; "we'll sign a treaty. I'll give you my word not to write any letters to your father about you, or about anything that concerns you. You manage the correspondence yourself. If we come to a small snafu I'll write and tell him why, but I'll show you the letter before it goes. In the meantime, I'm not a spy. I'm not watching you, and I'm not having you watched, either. I won't ask the new chauffeur where you've been. That's the sort of thing I mean. Is that all right, as far as it goes?"

The girl had curled herself up in a corner of theavenport, her chin in the crook of an elbow. There was something compact about her pose, even in relaxation. She looked quite a lot like a young tomcat. She said nothing to Jennie's proposal, for the

Savings in Rent and Other Necessities Enable Soft Coal Miners To Afford Comfortable Homes and Motor Cars

INTERIOR OF MINERS' HOME, JEROME, PA.

The above pictures show a typical home of a soft coal miner. They answer the often asked question "What kind of houses do miners live in?"

Jerome, Pa., with a population of 1,200, where the views shown here were taken, is, according to Bituminous Operators' Special Committee investigators, "a company town of uniform houses, painted a warm blue gray. The houses are of good construction and set on a hillside not too precipitous for comfort."

Bituminous coal operators long ago saw the wisdom of fostering pride in the upkeep of their homes among their employees. Radio sets, musical instruments, well chosen books and magazines are the rule rather than the exception in soft coal miners' homes—and miners' wives are encouraged to maintain scrupulous order and cleanliness within the house and out.

It is to the advantage of all concerned, the operators point out, for the miners to have as well appointed and even luxurious homes as surroundings as possible. Soft coal miners are more fortunate than most other classes in being able to afford luxuries, in that they have to pay only a nominal amount for such necessities of life as rent, doctor's care, light and heat.

Comfortable four-room houses at Jerome, for example, rent for $8.00 a month. The operators make a small charge for electricity and coal is supplied to miners' homes often at less than the cost of production. Doctor and hospital charges vary from $2.75 a month for a single man to $11.50 a month for a married man—and this includes all expenses incident to illness, however protracted it may be. Miners, their wives and children have to pay only ten cents to see movies which show in cities for dollar prices and more, another saving in a matter which has come to be regarded nowadays as a necessity rather than a luxury. Nearly every mining camp boasts at least one moving picture theatre.

These savings enable miners in the soft coal fields of the country—and coal is mined in thirty States—to buy expensive automobiles, house furnishings and the like while still maintaining a comfortable balance at the savings bank.

The soft coal miners of one Colorado company collectively own automobiles valued at a little less than $1,000,000. In an adjacent community, investigators report that 1,257 families living at the mine own no less than 1,123 machines—just a shade less than one automobile for each miner's family. Sunday motor trips to nearby larger towns have come to be regarded as a regular occurrence.

Education of miners' children is amply provided for by the operators. Modern high-grade schools and well paid thoroughly trained teachers are to be found in the present mining community.

Sewing circles for the women, clubhouses for the men, illustrated lectures and Saturday night dances shared by both sexes, make for healthful community spirit and the upkeep of happy, comfortable homes.

better part of a minute, and then it was not an answer.

"What do you want me to promise on my side?" she asked.

"I can't think of anything I want to ask you to promise," Jennie had put a faint stress on the word "ask," but she didn't know whether it had reached the girl's ear or not.

After another silence Beatrice asked, "Does that include telegrams, too—that you won't send father about me?"

Until she tucked on the supplementary question, Jennie hadn't the least idea what she was talking about. "Telegrams?" she echoed. Then, as the meaning broke over her, "Oh—Merciful heavens!"

The surge of contemptuous disgust at a suspicion so mean, and a mind ungenerous enough to entertain it, was openly revealed in her tone. Trix looked round, met Jennie's eyes, and then lowered her own.

"I'm sorry," she said. "I beg your pardon for asking that. Only, what are you doing it for? If you're that kind of a person, why did you come? And if you despise me like that—and aren't going to tell on me, why do you stay? I know you hate it. You said you did. And it seemed as if there must be a trick about it, somehow."

Jennie's mood veered suddenly round to pity. "You poor child," she said; "you have had a rotten time of it, haven't you? I'll try to tell you the way it all is, as far as I'm concerned. I came, as I said, because your father wanted me to. It was a little weak-minded of me, I guess. One of the things in the world I'm proud of is the idea he's got that I never fail him. He certainly needed help from somewhere Sunday night, so when he asked me for it I said I'd try. On the off-chance, to tell the truth, that I could make a better job of it than he had. I can do better than he, once in a while, with certain kinds of things."

"I'll tell you why I thought perhaps I could here. It's because you're so much like him. I've worked for him—and with him—for seven years, which is seven times as long, he says, as any one else ever lasted. I know his faults like a book. He's suspicious. Just the way you are. He's got the devil's own temper. He doesn't bother—much—about other people's rights; expects them to look out for their own, and fight for them if necessary. And along with all that he's the biggest man I know, and the ablest, and one of the most lovable. I've got on with him, and been a help to him, and I'm proud of it. And since you're like him, I was interested to see whether I couldn't get on with you, too, and be a help to you."

He's handicapped with you, of course, by the fact that he adores you. I've never known him to be like that before. Ever since he wrote you that letter, he's been like a boy about you; fierce and proud—and sometimes downright idiotic. Well, I don't adore you—no more than I do him. If I'd adored him—or been afraid of him—I'd have lasted about one month.

"I've made up my mind I'll try treating you the way I've always treated him. I've never told tales on him. He's found out that when he tells me a thing, it's buried. I don't even tell it back to him as a reminder. That's why I won't tell tales on you. You'll find it out gradually, if there's time enough. I never ask him questions. Sometimes he tells me things for fun, and sometimes to see how they strike me—but never because I claim any right to know. I won't claim any rights with you. You aren't under any obligation to me. You don't have to ask my permission to do anything. You don't even have to pretend you like me—he never bothered to do that. I'm here, that's all. I'm intelligent and shock-proof and experienced. Experienced in more ways than you're likely to think. I mean I'm not an old maid exactly."

"How old are you?" Trix asked.

"Oh, I'm old enough," said Jennie complacently. "Thirty-four."

This seemed to be about all. She got up, lighted herself a cigarette, un-convincing—and, to her consternation, heard her own voice break and saw Beatrice swim away in a blur of tears.

The break caught the girl's attention instantly. She stopped weeping, sprang up, took a look to make sure, and, with a laugh, flung her arms round Jennie. "Ten aren't as hard-boiled as you let on to be," she said. "It was a fool to say I was experienced, anyhow," Jennie admitted. "I've hardly ever seen anybody cry before. I suppose I'll have to get used to it."

She was, however, much too experienced in the ways of human fallibility to fall into the error of supposing that merely by winning the opening sympathy, she had established permanently the sound, sane relation with Joe's daughter which any real help would have to be built upon.

Trix, having tasted her whole-hearted, started swinging now quite to the other end of the arc. Jennie had just worked in the photographic rooms of numerous big business offices without learning what the sort of momentary affection known as a "crash" is like. She had, though not often, been made the unwilling recipient of attentions of this sort and she had always hated them, sensing their fundamental unhealthiness. She couldn't have imagined herself reciprocating an attachment of this sort. Yet now, with Beatrice, she was slow in recognizing the familiar manifestations as belonging in that category.

Trix began getting up for breakfast with her, coming to the table in night gown and robe, pouring her coffee, making her toast, apparently seeing to it that everything was exactly right—superbly because Joe's domestic service was always perfect anyhow. He was one of those men who have the knack of getting it. But the child did succeed in investing the utilitarian meal with an atmosphere which Jennie enjoyed, though it was to the detriment of the morning paper. Then she consulted herself Jennie's chauffeur, driving her downtown every morning with great clan in the roadster, and calling for her faithfully every night; a real inconvenience this was, since Jennie was used to being free to come and go when she liked. Yet she found herself surprisingly reluctant to rebel at it. And she did only their long rides before or after dinner, just on the hither side of recklessness, and held there by faultless judgment and skill.

"You ought to have been an aviator," Jennie said once at the end of a vivid, ten seconds during which she'd held her breath.

"So I've been told," the girl remarked, "by someone who ought to know." At the end of another idle she made it clear enough who this was. "George Burns was an aviator in the war—precisely."

"So I've been told," the girl remarked, "by someone who ought to know." At the end of another idle she made it clear enough who this was. "George Burns was an aviator in the war—precisely."

She went back to theavenport, patted the heaving shoulder, clumsily, she felt, tried to say something un-convincing—and, to her consternation, heard her own voice break and saw Beatrice swim away in a blur of tears.

The break caught the girl's attention instantly. She stopped weeping, sprang up, took a look to make sure, and, with a laugh, flung her arms round Jennie. "Ten aren't as hard-boiled as you let on to be," she said. "It was a fool to say I was experienced, anyhow," Jennie admitted. "I've hardly ever seen anybody cry before. I suppose I'll have to get used to it."

She was, however, much too experienced in the ways of human fallibility to fall into the error of supposing that merely by winning the opening sympathy, she had established permanently the sound, sane relation with Joe's daughter which any real help would have to be built upon.

Trix, having tasted her whole-hearted, started swinging now quite to the other end of the arc. Jennie had just worked in the photographic rooms of numerous big business offices without learning what the sort of momentary affection known as a "crash" is like. She had, though not often, been made the unwilling recipient of attentions of this sort and she had always hated them, sensing their fundamental unhealthiness. She couldn't have imagined herself reciprocating an attachment of this sort. Yet now, with Beatrice, she was slow in recognizing the familiar manifestations as belonging in that category.

Trix began getting up for breakfast with her, coming to the table in night gown and robe, pouring her coffee, making her toast, apparently seeing to it that everything was exactly right—superbly because Joe's domestic service was always perfect anyhow. He was one of those men who have the knack of getting it. But the child did succeed in investing the utilitarian meal with an atmosphere which Jennie enjoyed, though it was to the detriment of the morning paper. Then she consulted herself Jennie's chauffeur, driving her downtown every morning with great clan in the roadster, and calling for her faithfully every night; a real inconvenience this was, since Jennie was used to being free to come and go when she liked. Yet she found herself surprisingly reluctant to rebel at it. And she did only their long rides before or after dinner, just on the hither side of recklessness, and held there by faultless judgment and skill.

"You ought to have been an aviator," Jennie said once at the end of a vivid, ten seconds during which she'd held her breath.

"So I've been told," the girl remarked, "by someone who ought to know." At the end of another idle she made it clear enough who this was. "George Burns was an aviator in the war—precisely."

Big Excitement At The North Pole!

WE have just received a radiogram from Bill Brownie, chief aide-de-camp to Santa Claus, dated "North Pole, Nov. 16th, 1923." The message states that Santa Claus has just completed arrangements to begin his annual trip to Wright-Metzler Store and that he may be expected to arrive some day toward the latter part of the week.

Brownie goes on to say that Santa Claus' helpers have been busier this year than ever before and that the toys they have made are most wonderful. He estimates that Santa's pack for 1923 will weigh at least 729 pounds more than it ever has in previous seasons.

As soon as we receive definite word from Santa as to the date of his arrival, we will let you know. Watch the papers all this week!

Youngest And Prettiest of Hohenzollerns, Born After War, Is Named "Heartache"

FRAULEIN BERENSDOFF WITH HER PAINTING OF THE 5-YEAR-OLD HEARTACHE HOLLENZOLLERN.

BERLIN—The youngest and incidentally, the prettiest of the Hohenzollern family, now once more attempting to climb into the saddle in Germany, is shown to be a typical little German fraulein by a portrait of her recently painted by Antie Berensdorf, the celebrated Berlin artist.

Young "Miss Hohenzollern" is the daughter of former Prince Oskar and his wife, the Countess Bassewitz, and is a grand-daughter of the ex-kaiser, and curiously enough, bears the name Herzleid, or Heartache, having been named because she was born during the revolution at the close of the war.
